Health literacy development in Tasmanian early years services

As a social enterprise, HealthLit4Everyone relies on partnerships with like-minded organisations to support our work.

Development and delivery of health literacy professional development for early years educators.

Tasmania

Early years,
Education

$150,000

Why this is important

Early years educators can maximise their impact by identifying and responding to health literacy needs. They are also in a position to support families and carers to develop their own health literacy.

How your investment will be used

Your investment will be used to adapt HealthLit4Kids to support early years educators and deliver the program in 50 early years learning centres in Tasmania.

Community impact of your support

Delivery of this project will result in:

- Early years learning centres being supported to become health literacy responsive settings
- Early years educators having increased confidence and competence to deliver health education and develop health literacy.

Why health literacy?

Health literacy – how we find, understand and use health and wellbeing information and services – impacts our quality of life through its influence on our health, our education, our social supports and even how productive and successful we are in life.

How healthy, educated and successful we are in life influences our quality of life, our family's quality of life and the lives of others in the community around us.

Health literacy is an essential asset for healthy, happy and productive individuals and communities.
